CHALLENGE

A leading global healthcare provider recognizes the importance of design and the relationship between physical environmental factors and resident and staff outcomes in patient care settings. An excellent healing environment will reinforce excellent clinical quality, but an inferior environment can detract from fine clinical care.

The healthcare company viewed their patients as “guests” and wanted to create a consumer oriented patient care setting that was as conducive as possible to healing.

SOLUTIONS

This healthcare company engaged MAG Resources early in the planning process. MAG Resources collaborated with them to identify ways in which we could incorporate a shading strategy that would yield positive results for their staff and patients. Together we concluded that the following design principals would yield the best possible results for patients and staff:

- Privacy for patients
- Maintain view to outside
- Improved indoor air quality
- Ease of cleaning & maintenance

RESULTS

This healthcare provider's shade program has been a huge success and has been incorporated in over 300+ remodel and new construction properties a year for the last 5 years.
